A collar with an identification tag is the simplest and most economical way to make sure lost pets find their way back home. Still, many feline pet parents delay or resist buying collars for their pets.

3 out of 4 cats will actually wear a collar (even if their pet parents don't think they will).

Patented Twin Swivel Snaps

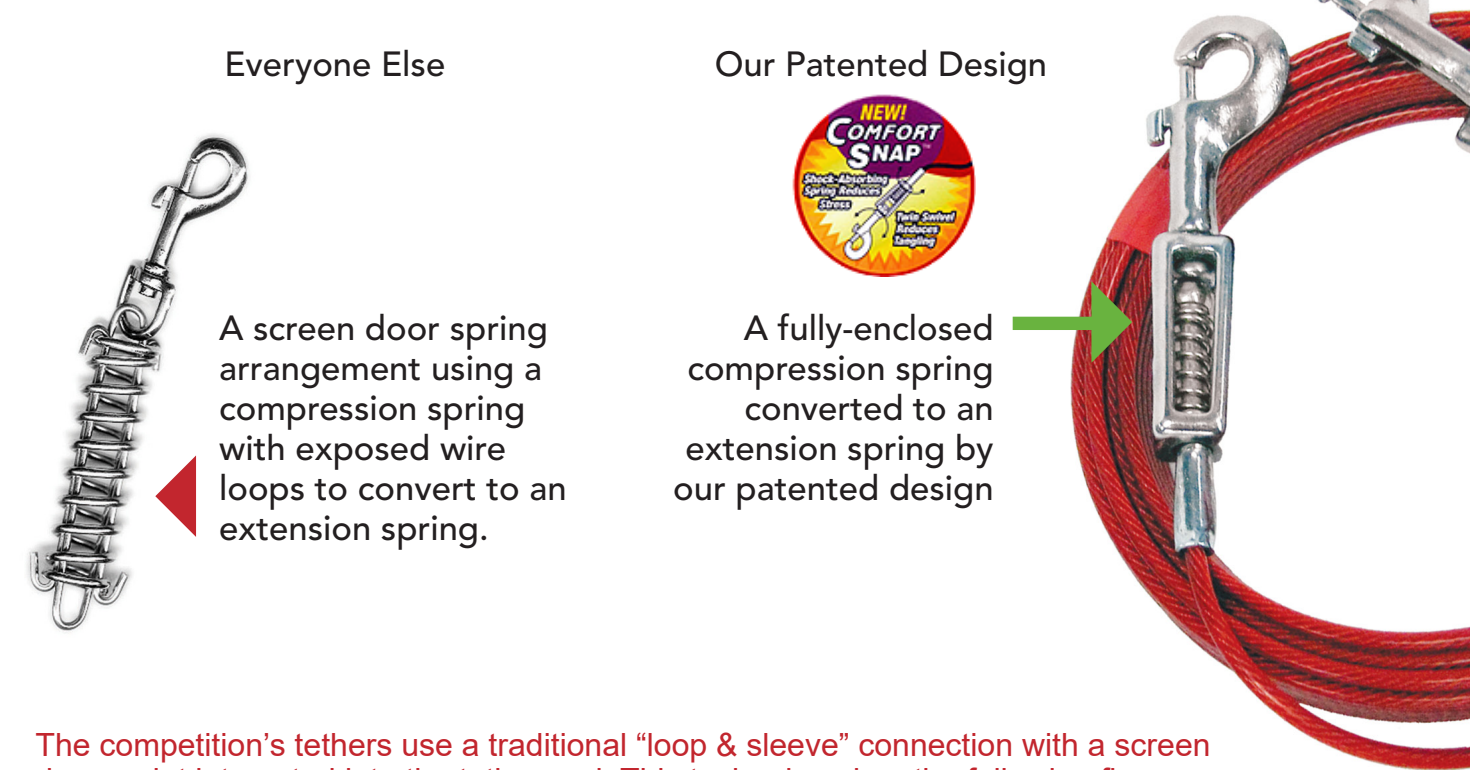

The competition's tethers use a traditional "loop & sleeve" connection with single swivel, bolt-action snaps. This technology has the following flaws:

- Requires the use of heavier cable than needed to secure ends.
- Loop & sleeve connection point frequently fails because the sleeve is crimping plastic, which more readily gives, allowing pet to escape.
- Single swivel snaps can become frozen or lodged under the pet's front leg causing failure of this vital safety feature. The pet could also become tangled in the tie-out or even injured.
- The industry standard when using dog weight ratings is to manufacture at 7 times the dog's weight .
- Competition: 60 lb. dog = 420 lb. break strength

Boss Pet builds the lightest tether possible to maximize dog comfort while providing the holding power necessary to safely restrain the dog in each weight class.

- "Direct connect" metal-on-metal method for a more consistent hold.
- Higher safety and product lifespan with our patented twin swivel snap.
- We over engineer all of our cable products and test to 9 times dog weight.
- The Boss Pet standard when using dog weight ratings is to manufacture at 9 times the dog's weight .
- Boss Pet: 60 lb. dog = 540 lb. break strength

Patented Integrated Spring Snap

The competition's tethers use a traditional "loop & sleeve" connection with a screen door spring interested into the tether end. This technology has the following flaws:

- Wire forms leave exposed hooks that can and have caused injury to a pet or pet owner.
- If the spring fails, the product fails, and the pet is free to roam away.
- Usually upon failure, spring is fully compressed, causing metal parts to go flying through the air, potentially causing injury.
- Loop & sleeve connection point frequently fails because the sleeve is crimping plastic, which more readily gives, allowing pet to escape.
- The industry standard when using dog weight ratings is to manufacture to 7 times dog weight .
- Competition: 60 lb. dog = 420 lb. break strength

Boss Pet builds the lightest tether possible to maximize dog comfort while providing the holding power necessary to safely restrain the dog in each weight class.

- Fully enclosed spring design, with no exposed wire hooks, and no risk of flying parts.
- Spring can fail and pet will still remain tethered.
- "Direct connect" metal-on-metal method for a more consistent hold.
- We over engineer all of our cable products and test to 9 times dog weight.
- The Boss Pet standard when using dog weight ratings is to manufacture to 9 times dog weight .
- Boss Pet: 60 lb. dog = 540 lb. break strength

CABLE & TETHERING

WEIGHT-RATED

Color coded packaging boosts buyer confidence and reduces store return rates! Experience an average increase in sales of about 14%. It is simply easier for the consumer to select the tie-out they need.

STEP 1: We researched all dog breeds for common weight groupings and tether escape tendencies based upon a three-year study of tie-out failures.

STEP 2: We developed five groups of dog weights each of which pose unique tethering challenges as shown above.

STEP 3: We built the lightest tether possible to maximize dog comfort while providing the holding power necessary to safely restrain the dog in each weight class. We used a multiple of dog weight (9 times) for this purpose which exceeds the industry standard of 7 times.

STEP 4: We developed product labels that clearly state which tie-out is right for a given dog weight class. This label scheme uses:

- Color-coded background unique to each weight class
- Cable color unique to each class
- Clear statement of dog weight on front of label
