READY, SET, GROW.

By 2030, the last of the baby boomers will have moved into the ranks of the older population. This progression will result in a shift in the country's age structure—from 13.7 percent of the population aged 65 and older in 2012, to 20.3 percent in 2030.* As these boomers age, the number of stroke victims and people with chronic diseases will grow, as will the number of people who require rehabilitation therapy to restore function, improve mobility, relieve pain, and prevent or limit physical disabilities.

Older people are also more prone to falls and other injuries that can progress to chronic conditions or require surgery, if left untreated. Hospitals working to reduce readmissions will likely increase referrals for rehabilitation therapy as these patients become more numerous.

Therapists see an average of 20 patients a day.*

KEEPING UP
WITH A RAPIDLY GROWING INDUSTRY.

The Race to Keep Pace

Growth this fast usually generates a few growing pains. Recent healthcare reforms have already boosted the demand for post-acute therapy services. And as the need for therapy increases, the existing shortage of physical therapists is likely to intensify. With therapists already seeing an average of 20 patients a day, time will become increasingly precious.*

Physical therapy departments also have to contend with low Medicare reimbursement rates and caps. And pressures to remain competitive and keep up with new technology will likely increase the need to upgrade equipment.

From Striving to Thriving

As the number one medical supply provider for post-acute facilities for the past 40 years, Medline understands these challenges. And we have responded with a comprehensive new product line of therapy and rehab products, knowledgeably sourced and specifically tailored to address conditions affecting post-acute patients.

With more than 350,000 medical products in its portfolio, Medline may already supply the majority of your medical supplies. We can now provide you with the opportunity for true one-stop shopping, as you add your therapy supplies to your existing Medline order.

This consolidation will not only save you considerable time, but also money, requiring fewer purchase orders and providing savings on freight for qualifying orders. And Medline offers generous and flexible financing for up to three years, with 12 months of interest-free financing potentially available to qualified customers.

Unmatched Support

Medline is known for its customer support. Our product team will provide expert consultation and assistance with room planning, logistics coordination and delivery management. Our sales representatives will also partner with you to perform a collaborative business review—a cost analysis comparing your facility's spending with that of your competitor's and industry benchmarks. If your costs seem high, our reps will work with you to find ways to bring them in line, while still providing quality treatment options.

Reliable and Effective Equipment and Supplies

The expertly chosen products on the following pages can help your facility maintain the type of effective, results-achieving rehab program that builds reputations and earns referrals.

SEATING AND POSITIONING CUSHIONS

Choose from pressure redistribution cushions in a variety of strengths, materials and shapes to provide resident protection at every level. All cushions are fluid- stain-resistant, and easy to clean.

Cushion Selection Guide

In this section each cushion is rated according to the pressure redistribution level it provides and materials are detailed. Use the key below to determine your pressure and material requirements, then find the appropriate cushions on the chart on the following page.

Step 1

What level of pressure redistribution does your resident need?

Basic

For lower-risk, seated individuals, basic cushions add comfort and basic pressure redistribution.

Moderate

For individuals at risk for pressure ulcers, moderate cushions help redistribute pressure and sometimes aid positioning.

Advanced

For your highest-risk patients or those with pressure ulcers, advanced cushions provide optimal pressure redistribution while aiding positioning.

Step 2

What type of cushion material is best for your resident?

Foam

For basic through moderate pressure redistribution. Different foam densities provide different levels of comfort, from high-resiliency foam to visco-elastic memory foam.

Gel with Foam

For basic, moderate and advanced pressure redistribution. Typically, high-quality foams contain gel sacks that separate into quadrants to help reduce pressure on problem areas.

All Gel

For moderate to advanced pressure redistribution. Grid-like design cradles bony prominences for ultimate pressure redistribution.

Air Cells

For advanced pressure redistribution. Weight is redistributed evenly throughout the entire cushion.

Step 3

Which cushion design will work best for your resident?

INFINITY

Wrist brace

INFINITY™ - Moderate Resistance to Stretch

This most-preferred splinting material combines plastic and rubber-like characteristics with a controlled level of rigidity, allowing for the fabrication of infinite types of splints. INFINITY is a material with the perfect balance between resistance to stretch and drape. INFINITY Thin ( $\frac{1}{16}$  and  $\frac{3}{32}$  inch) heats in 15 to 30 seconds and has a working time of one to two minutes. All thicknesses are available in smooth or perforated. Thinner materials are used for arthritic and pediatric patients.

- » Controlled stretch makes larger patterns easy to handle
- » Intricate conformability, ensuring precise fit
- » Sufficient rigidity eliminates need for reinforcement
- » Flexibility stands up to high stress applications (weight-bearing splints)
- » Resists fingerprints and marks

Recommended for:

- » All upper and lower extremity splints
- » Static and dynamic splints
- » Spastic patients
- » Elbow and knee splints
- » Hand, finger, and wrist splints
- » Fracture bracing
- » Body jackets

REBOUND™ - Moderate Resistance to Stretch

Coated sheet surface avoids accidental sticking but provides enough tack to hold a temporary bond for the “wrap and tack” splinting technique. Press the surfaces of REBOUND together and, when cooled, the bond can be popped apart. Great for elbow splints or for any circumferential splints. Permanent bond can be achieved by disturbing the surfaces or with a bonding solvent. Transparent when reaching proper molding temperature of 160 degrees F (70 degrees C). Provides assistance with proper placement of splint to avoid pressure areas. Upon cooling, the material will return to its original white color (not applicable to color products).

- » Reheat and remold with ease due to 100 percent elastic-type memory
- » The only coated/treated elastic splinting material that does not stick when heated
- » Instant bonding and no shrinkage

How to Determine Which Wheelchair Is the Best Fit

Achieving a proper fit for a user in his or her new wheelchair can be extremely critical to the patient's health and wellness. It can make the difference between either promoting recovery or causing further injury. Some of the issues that an improper fit can cause for the user of the wheelchair are:

- » Posture issues
- » Breathing problems
- » Sores
- » Discomfort
- » Pelvic issues
- » Hip problems

Measure for a perfect fit

1 Determine Seat Size

- » Seat width should be determined by measuring from hip to hip in a straight line. Add two inches to this measurement.
- » Seat depth should be determined by measuring from the back of the hip to the back of the knee of the user while seated. Subtract one inch from this measurement.

2 Determine Arm Type and Height

- » If the user is going to be standing up to do pivot transfers, they will require a full-length arm on the chair to help support them as they push off to stand.
- » Desk-length arms are suggested for ease of use with tables and desks.
- » Determine the height of the wheelchair arm by measuring from the elbow to the seat of the chair while the user is holding their arms up with their elbows bent at a ninety degree angle. Height adjustable arms are suggested when possible.

3 Determine Footrest Style

- » Elevating leg rests are always suggested when patients are required to raise their legs for conditions such as edema, swelling or injury.
- » Determine the length of the footrest by measuring from the back of the knee to the heel of the foot.
- » In taller patients, consider using articulating leg rests. These leg rests extend longer as the elevating portion of the leg rest rises.

4 Determine Back Height

- » Determine the measurement from the patient's scapula or collarbone down to the seat while the user is sitting in a chair.
- » Taller back heights may be required for patients that require upper trunk support or other support devices that may be installed for the user.

5 Determine Floor to Seat Height

- » Determine if the user will need to use his or her feet to propel or move. Measure the distance between the back of the knee to the heel to determine the seat to floor height.

6 Determine Wheelchair Weight and Weight Limit

- » Determine the patient's weight in order to choose what weight capacity wheelchair will be required.
- » Determine the level of upper body strength in the user. Weaker patients will require lighter wheelchairs.
