Corning launches consumer products divisions with introduction of heat resistant glass bakeware trademarked as Pyrex®

Proprietary 3-layer glass technology (Vitrele) launches as Corelle®

Corning Consumer Products Company formed

Corningware® Pyroceram cookware introduced

Acquired RevereWare®

PYREX®... In the early 1900s Corning Inc. produced a new lantern glass for the railroads that wouldn't break when the hot glass came in contact with rain or snow. In 1913 the wife of a Corning scientist asked her husband to bring some of this glass home to bake a sponge cake.

The result was...

- Shorter cooking time
- Cake did not stick to glass and was easy to remove
- Cake was unusually uniform
- Flavor of the cake did not remain in dish
- The progress of the cakes baking could be monitored through the clear glass

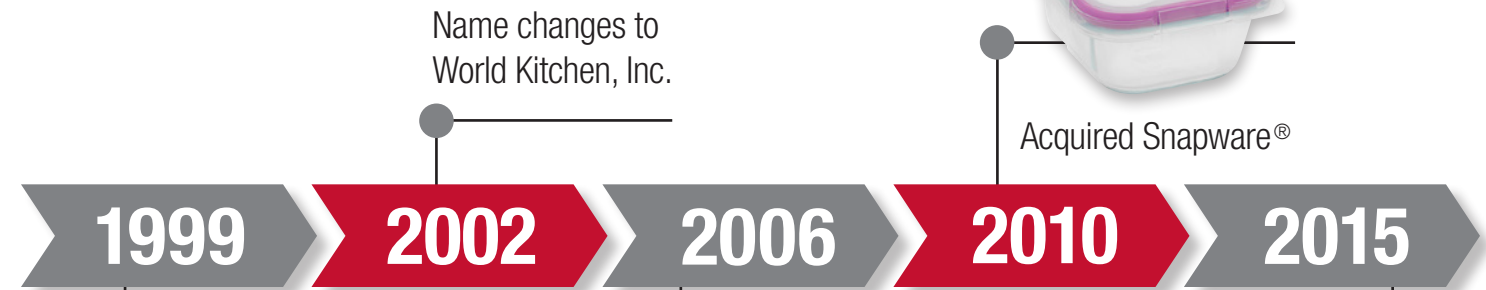

VOILA...in May of 1915 the first Pyrex bakeware order was placed.

CORELLE®... In the time period B.C. (before Corelle®), only two kinds of dinnerware existed: Ceramic and plastic. Neither was ideal. Ceramic looked nice but chipped and cracked easily. Plastic, on the other hand, offered durability but lacked respectability. Serve patrons on a chipped or plastic dinner plates? Unthinkable! Enter Corning researchers, who developed a game-changer called Vitrelle, a remarkable three-layer sandwich of thermally laminated glass that offered a look, feel and audible "ring" of china, coupled with exceptional durability.

This breakthrough material eventually emerged as the Corelle® brand, the world's best-selling dinnerware.

CORNINGWARE®... For more than half a century, CorningWare® bakeware has paired exceptional performance and versatile design with an eye toward the modern. In fact, the original glass-ceramic material, Pyroceram®, was a marvel of engineering, designed in the 1950s during the space race to safely absorb huge temperature fluctuations in rocket nose cones. If it's good enough for our Astronauts, why not American kitchens? Introduced in 1958 to busy yet innovative cooks, it was able to go directly from freezer to oven to table.

Acquired Snapware®

Celebrate Pyrex® 100th Year

A space age discovery!

REVERE™... REVERE metal cookware was born from the same craftsmanship and durability that historical figure Paul Revere, himself, established in his metalsmith business back in 1801. Revere's interest in copper rolling began after the American Revolution when the Navy wanted to use the copper rolling process for sheathing the nation's ships. Eventually, Revere's copper sheets would provide sheathing for ships in the American fleet. Through a series of mergers in 1928 and 1929, Revere Copper became Revere Copper and Brass Inc. By 1938, James M. Kennedy, an employee, invented copper-clad cookware, which went into production and is now known as Revere Ware.

From Naval ships to your kitchen...Revere has certainly earned its sea legs!

CHICAGO CUTLERY®... Chicago Cutlery was founded in 1930 to serve the butchers and meatpacking plants of Chicago. Our specialty: keeping knives sharp and finely honed for the masters of the craft. When the demand for sharp knives increased, the Chicago Cutlery brand evolved into a knife manufacturing business catering to the meat and poultry industries. In 1969, Chicago Cutlery brand began making professional-grade knives for every kitchen.

We were born for this job. Made for this job. And we're ready for this job!

Corelle® The Ultimate Investment.

Made with proprietary Vitrelle® material, Corelle® provides:

✓ Superior Durability
