ProWood Makes the Grade

ProWood Professional Grade treated lumber is the brand of choice for building professionals because it's beautiful, easy to work with, durable and environmentally friendly. It's perfect for decks, exposed structures, sill plates and many other applications.

ProWood is more than just another line of pressure-treated lumber; it's the latest in treatment technology—the result of years of research.

ProWood—treated with MCA (micronized copper azole)—is less corrosive to fasteners and can be used in direct contact with aluminum. Normal hot-dip galvanized fasteners can be used in most cases. In fact, our ProWood products treated under ICC-ES ESR 2240 can be used with carbon steel fasteners in interior applications such as sill plates, interior framing and interior trusses (see ESR 2240 for details). These fasteners may be used for UC1 and UC2 interior, above ground and other weather-protected applications.

ProWood Advantages

- Clean, odorless, non-staining and non-irritating to humans, animals and plants
- Compatible with aluminum building products
- Protects against rot, decay and termites
- Warranted for interior, exterior, above ground and ground contact
- Has a fresh-looking, more natural appearance than other types of copper-based treated products
- Less corrosive to fasteners
- Paints and stains appear closer to their intended color
- Lifetime limited warranty—the best residential warranty in the industry—against structural damage caused by termites or fungal decay for interior, exterior, above ground and ground contact applications
- Building code approved under ICC-ES ESR 2240 and ESR 1721

Understanding the End Tag

Each piece of ProWood Professional Grade lumber carries an end tag that provides essential information, including:

- The preservative used
- The appropriate end use (e.g., above ground or ground contact)
- The quality standards it meets
- Safe handling information
- Warranty

It Shows ProWood Meets the Highest Quality Standards

ProWood's end tag shows which ProWood products are treated in accordance with ESR or AWPA standards and are in compliance with model building code requirements.

prowood[®] KILN DRIED

Stability and versatility guaranteed.

Robust, reliable Kiln Dried After Treatment (KDAT) lumber can be counted on for lifetime protection against termites and decay, as well as improved dimensional stability.

Rely on the stability of KDAT lumber year after year.

KDAT lumber has all the weather-beating durability of treated wood, but it's dried in a kiln, which dramatically reduces shrinking, checking and warping. It's easy to measure, easy to cut, and can be stained or treated immediately; no drying time necessary.

Additional benefits include:

- Compatible with aluminum and carbon steel (black iron) fasteners
- Water repellent for reduced checking (optional)
- Lighter for improved handling and easy installation
