Three Categories of Lighting

General or Ambient

Lighting that illuminates the entire room as opposed to specific areas. This type of light generally comes from several directions and provides an even, open feeling.

Task Lighting

Lighting that specifically brightens work surfaces such as: countertops, sinks, ranges, eating areas, work benches, and other areas where really bright light is needed in a specific area.

Accent Lighting

Lighting that focuses attention on specific areas or objects as opposed to the entire room. Accent lighting can add interest by creating various effects from romantic to dramatic.

Fixture Types

Different fixtures are used to achieve the categories of lighting. Here's a brief description of the most common types.

Bars

Fixtures with rectangular-shaped housings that usually house light sources along its length. Typical uses: under kitchen cabinets and bathroom vanities.

Pucks

Called 'puck' lights for their resemblance to that of a hockey puck, these lights produce a defined beam of light. Several accent lights spaced evenly apart are usually used. Typical uses: under kitchen cabinets, entertainment centers, bathroom vanities, china & curio cabinets and book cases.
